

Tap Into Your Highest Resources

EVA GREGORY ·

Each person is inherently entitled to choose their own spiritual belief system and how they prefer to honor and practice these beliefs. These practices and beliefs are individual and highly personal in nature. While nobody has the right or ability to force you to believe in anything in particular, there is one commonality with people who are in touch with the law of attraction: trust in that there is a power available to them that is greater than themselves, greater than human beings in knowledge, resources and abilities. Regardless of the different beliefs that we each have, doesn't it make sense that there is a more highly developed Source which holds—and makes available—the answers to your questions? Questions like, where will I find my success, how can I change my path, or where will this choice lead me? That Source is your Inner Guidance.

Are you in touch with your Inner Guidance for all of the business decisions and situations that life tosses at you? Do you tend to separate your spiritual beliefs from your monetary wants, needs, and goals? If so, why? Is it because of limiting beliefs that money is evil, or perhaps that asking for money is self-serving, or that wealth is a sin? One of the most respected men of the bible ... Abraham ... was quite wealthy, and his wealth was a result of his loyalty.

Poverty is often associated with virtue, while it is a common belief that wealth is evil. However, it's not the money that is evil, but the negative actions that produce evil. Case in point, there are many wealthy people who do wonderful thoughtful things for others because they have a great deal of money: donations to charities, sponsorship of surgeries, and summer youth programs, to name a few. On the other hand, there are those who gain money by illegal or immoral means, use money to partake in illegal activity, or use wealth as a weapon to take advantage of those not in a position to fight back. Acquiring the wealth isn't evil. Abundance is an important factor in the Law of Attraction. When there is more than enough, lack is not allowed to enter the scene. Sharing your abundance with others is pivotal in creating more and more, for both yourself and others. Suffice it to say that Inner Guidance would be practicing self-defeat by letting your hopes, dreams, and desires wither away to nothing. You can't share what you don't have.

This said, if you haven't been asking your Inner Guidance for the answers to all of your questions, ask immediately. And if questions are being asked, and answers do not appear to be getting through, take your spiritual pulse, recognize where you are vibrating and take the steps to correct it.

The ultimate reward comes in having the liberty to take command of your own life, answering to yourself in your business practices, choosing the course you will take in your life and to follow your own chosen direction. By utilizing and trusting your Inner Guidance in creating your reality in business and in life, there is no limit to what you can accomplish. Just remember to ask for the answers that you are seeking, listen for the answers when they occur, and believe that you are worthy of the rewards when you stand to receive them.

Discover How to Tap Into Inner Guidance for Business Success - The Critical Missing Piece That Will Transform Your Business From Stressful to Successful here.